

Actimax's sweet scent of telecoms success

The environment as well as a company's travelling time and fuel costs were the winners when top solutions company Actimax solved a telecoms problem for manufacturing company Claremont & May. Basildon, Essex-based Actimax won the contract to install a new telephone system that would support videoconferencing facilities, the ideal solution to cutting the number of inter-location journeys. Actimax technicians recommended a Mitel 3300 system and a Mitel Videoconferencing platform utilising Claremont & May's already-installed new CAT5 computer cabling for the new IP-based phone system. Claremont & May staff can now videoconference using a datalink between the two sites.

Reader Enquiry Number

721